QUARANTINE, Sopt. 21.—Out of the seven pest ships that were anchored in the lower two mained this morning. These were the Wysoming, Scandia and Bohemia, the Moravia having come up late yesterday afternoon and joined the Normannia, Rugia and Heligoland, which are anchored just above the Upper Quarantine station.

Dr. Byron's midnight report from Swinburne Island, including the four new Bohemia suspects at swinburne Island and the new case among the Normannia's people at Camp Had No Suspicion of Infection.

The Heligoland is now loading with oil from lighters, and will put to sea without going up to her pier, as soon as she is fully laden. The Moravia's passengers will probably be transferred to hoboxen and Ellis Island to-day, and the ship herself, together with the Rugia and Normannia, will be lightered in

Under Dr. Waizer's orders, the Wyoming, which still lies in midstream just below the Narrows, is being thoroughly cleaned and he will move to have the name changed only when he has been so instructed by his constituency.

Manager Chandler, of the Kenwood House, is one of those who do not approve of any change in the name of the thoroughter.

"The Bowery is all right, said Mr. Chandler, "an! If it isn't good enough for some people, why some people ought to move into some other street. The fact is, the authorities ought to go slow in changing the name of a street. How silly it was, for example, to change the name of Chatham into Park Row, which naturally ends at the city Hail Park. The men who did it didn't know that Lord Chatham was one of the lest friends America had, who stood up manfully in the British Parliament against king George Iti. in defense of the Americans."

Mr. John Howard, proprietor of the Kenwood House, admitted that the movement was on loot, but that he himself was opposed to at olishing the name of the Bowerty.

"It is a historical landmark of New York." said Mr. Howard, "and should be preserved. There are thousands upon thousands of visitors from all parts of the country who worldn't leave the metropolis without making a trip on the Bowery iron Cooper Union to Chatham Square and down to the bridge through Chatham street—I beg pardon—Park Row. I am opposed to the change—the Bowery is good enough for me."

The "Bucere," as it was originally called, was once a long lane bordered with farms, whence the name. It was part of the original post road from New York to Boston, which ran up Broadway to the City Hall Park, through Duane and Chatham streets to the Bowery; here hackers conscious agon.
